Red Light Winter is a two-act play by American playwright Adam Rapp. The Steppenwolf Theatre Company premiered the play on May 30, 2005 at their Merle Reskin Garage Theatre in Chicago. Rapp directed the production, which continued until July 10, 2005. The company took the play to New York to run Off-Broadway at the Barrow Street Theatre, where it opened for previews from January 20, 2006. It then ran there as a regular production from February 9, 2006, to June 25, 2006. In 2012 the play appeared

Red Light Winter, an excellent play by Adam Rapp, getting a remount in a very fine production by The Bridge Production Group directed by Claire Edmonds, genuinely speaks to the nuances of our experiences, the volume of what we encompass, the peculiar range of our true feelings. The alternative and abstract theater world has always implicitly dealt with this, but that Rapp has found this in a rather straightforward structure is a significant accomplishment.

There was so much pre-opening talk about the amount of nudity and the graphic depiction of sexual acts in Adam Rapp's latest play Red Light Winter that it could have had the effect of undermining the more overriding and provocative theme of this incisively written, dramatically involving drama. If the apparent theme - you always hurt the one you love - appears subtly indexed within the dramatic context that involves the turbulent and testy relationship of two long-time buddies cum ...
